

been in his mind. 'I should have liked you,' write Austen in July, 1830, to have had a picking out of th:
 general election ; it would be a famous opening and. ¹^{Q1} to say.' During his sojourn in the East, Disraeli fr^a been a diligent reader of Gralignani, and he used in. latf life to say that it was in studying a file of that 'excellei publication' during his long detention in quarantine i Malta that he first began to understand politics.¹ Tlroiig G-alignani he was able to follow the fortunes of tl Reform movement, and he followed them with the keene interest. 'What a confusion you are all in,' lie wro to Austen from Constantinople, when he read of th
 'bold act of cowardice'² on the part of the Wellingt Ministry, the postponement of the King's visit to t] City in November, 1830. 'I have just got thtrou^ a batch of GraUgnanis. What a capital Pantomime would make: "The Lord Mayor's Day or Harlequ Brougham." ' ; and the fancy pleased him so muctt th by a habit that was already forming he repeated it almost the same words in letters to his father and Bialw •adding to Bulwer, ' Oh for the days of Aristopliaii' or Foote, or even Scaramouch! Damn the Licenser
 •* The wonderful news which meets me here in a pile Q-alignnanis has quite unsettled my mind,' he writes f re Cairo on reading of the introduction of the first Irtef o:
 Bill. ' I am of course very anxious to hear of tine p: gress of the Bill. I have heard up to the majority of on Disraeli arrived in England on the day that Parliaxnt •was prorogued after the rejection of the second R,ef o

¹ Life of Jowett, It., p. 109.

² The phrase was Lord Wellesley's. Disraeli has an interesting i on this occurrence, written in 1836 : —

'Sir Robert Peel told me that Hume was the real cause of the Ki: not going into the City. They had received many -warnings and T» information, when suddenly Joseph sought a confidential intei-vie-v the Home Office and told Peel he was in possession of information o: •extraordinary character and that an insurrection was certain. AJ wards Joseph had the impudence to make a speech in the TTous< Commons abusing the Ministers for not letting the King go, and. dLecla that it was his solemn belief that the outcry was all an alarming inven of their own. " I might have risen and crushed him, the impudent d< said Peel. Why did he not ? The interview was certainly confiden "but the speech absolved the Minister, in my opinion.'

